

CITY MATTERS.

Officer Norton arrested John Montgomery this afternoon, but he was released on bond furnished by Mr. H. L. Rockfield.

Mr. Will R. Horner was upon the street a short time this morning after weeks of illness, from which he is slowly recovering.

A part of a sewing machine was found this morning by the men who gather up the garbage and ashes. It is at police headquarters.

Hon. J. K. Mower and Randolph Coleman Esq., are also said to be candidates for the office of City Solicitor, on the Republican ticket.

The annual concert of the Second English Lutheran Saboth school was postponed to next Sunday evening at half-past seven o'clock.

The petition of Springfield publishers for reduction of postage on second class matter, was presented in the Senate, at Washington, Monday.

George Yates, the boy who is charged with burglarizing Young's grocery a few nights ago, was bound over to court yesterday in the sum of $300.

The annual meeting of the Woman's Benevolent Society, to be held Thursday evening in the Second Presbyterian Church, should be kept in mind. All are invited to attend.

Ohio with a force of 3,843 men, tanks fourth of the United States in the numerical strength of her organized militia, New York, Pennsylvania and Florida leading this State.

At the weekly meeting of the Building and Loan Association last night, two shares, $400, were sold at $113 per share. Bidding was active. There will another sale of money in a few weeks.

Mr. B. H. Warder, of this city, yesterday bought nine lots on Sixteenth street, Washington, D. C. for the sum of $37,063. It is reported here he will build upon one or all of them, himself.

Mr. Geo. Diber, an old citizen of Springfield, now located in Kossuth county, Kansas, is here, the guest of his son-in-law, Austin Evans. Kansas seems to agree with Mr. Diber, and he looks not a day older than when he left us.

The ladies of the First Baptist Church will give a social on Thursday evening of this week at the residence of Mr. Adam Lenhart, No. 96 West Pleasant street. A cordial invitation is extended to all friends of the church and congregation to be present.

Henry Snyder, alias Joseph Grubbs, for whom the police here were looking on charge of stealing Magruder's horse, at Xenia, has been captured at Symmes's Corners, Xenia county, and identified. It is said he has stolen eight horses since the Magruder affair.

This afternoon occurred a surprise presentation to Mrs. M. E. Kinney, for the past three years the efficient and hard-working President of the St. Paul M. E. Ladies Benevolent Society, which held the meeting with Mrs. Geo. W. Winwood, South Plank street. The affair was very pleasant, mutually so.

Revival meetings, which have been in progress at the Second Baptist Church since the week of prayer, still continue with unabated interest. The church is crowded every evening. Last night there was scarcely standing room. So far, there have been about twenty conversions. As many more, we learn, have expressed a desire to become Christians.

A pleasant and most complete surprise was tendered by his many friends to Edgar R. Taylor, last night, at his home, No. 86 West Washington street, on the occasion of his seventeenth birthday anniversary. Dancing and social games were indulged in until twelve, when luncheon was served, and all departed wishing the young man a long and prosperous life.

Dr. Samuel Adams, formerly a Springfield character, was arrested at Urbana and taken to Bellefontaine last night on a charge of bigamy. He some time ago, while his wife's petition for divorce from him was yet pending, married a woman with six children, the woman's husband being then alive and not divorced from her. She is also indicted for bigamy. Nice crowd.

Dr. M. F. Welsh filed an affidavit this afternoon against Dr. Campbell for disorderly conduct. Yesterday afternoon Dr. Welsh was assisting an invalid lady into his buggy, when, it is claimed, "Doc" Campbell came up and with an oath declared that Dr. Welsh had his buggy robe. After a few words Dr. Welsh produced the gentleman from whom he had purchased the robe, and settled the matter. It is claimed that Campbell was very rough in his manner and used profane language in the presence of the lady.

A load of coal dumped in the gutter on North Limestone street scared a horse passing and away he went down the icy hillside like a flash. Opposite the county buildings the wagon smashed into one of Morrow & McCracken's delivery wagons and dropped with a smashed wheel. The horse fell and slid on one side the remainder of the distance to the corner of Columbia street, and there stopped. The horse and wagon belonged to Fred Shultz, living north of the city on the Potomac pike. The contents of the wagon, potatoes, eggs, and other produce remaining from sales in the market, were scattered broadcast. The potatoes were gathered up again, but the thirty cents a dozen eggs were not, owing to circumstances over which the owner had no control.

Minnie Madden in "Caprice" at the Grand Opera House to-night.

Miss Cora Van Tassel gave a very satisfactory characterization of "Fanchon" at Black's last evening, before a large and well pleased audience. To-night she will appear in "The Danites." The price of admission is ten cents; reserved seats twenty cents. Bartley Campbell's "White Slave" will be presented at the Grand next Friday evening. The Indianapolis Sentinel says: Bartley Campbell's beautiful play, "The White Slave," never was better presented. The actors on the stage seemed to be inspired by the presence of such a vast throng of people, and worked as they never worked before. Every member of the company did well, and the result was a well rounded performance that pleased everybody, and received the most enthusiastic applause from beginning to end.

The box sheet for "Virginia," with the eminent Frederick Warder, which is to be presented at the Grand next Saturday evening, will be opened at Carter's to-morrow morning at 9 o'clock.

Superintendent White presented a communication from W. H. Weir stating that ever since the study of literature had been taken up, there has been lack of completeness because of not being able to supplement and follow up the facts learned by the study of carefully selected portions of the literary work of the different authors. WATERS' WRANGLE.

Alex. Hughes Severely Injured by Being Struck on the Head by John Montgomery.

This morning about ten o'clock a serious affray occurred at the Arcade Hotel, which resulted in the injuring of one of the waiters named Alex. Hughes. The friends of both parties have their different stories to tell, and it is difficult to get at the true particulars of the occurrence. John Montgomery, the head waiter at the hotel, and Alex. Hughes, the injured man, have always been great friends. In fact, it was Montgomery who secured Hughes his position. Those who are in a position to know say that within the past few days the two men have had several quarrels, none of which, however, amounted to anything except a war of words. This morning several of the waiters, among whom were Hughes and Montgomery, were in the dining-room cleaning. Hughes had a cloth which Montgomery wanted to clean the mirror with. Hughes refused to let him have it, and in a few moments the men were fighting. Montgomery struck Hughes and in doing so hurt his own hand. He then rushed down stairs out into the alley, and picking up a large rough stone, tied it in a handkerchief and started back. The men met in the wash-room, and Montgomery struck at Hughes with the stone. The first blow struck Hughes on the left arm and disabled him. Before those who were in the room could interfere Montgomery again struck Hughes, this time on the head just above the left eye, inflicting an ugly wound, consisting of three gashes. They were then separated. Hughes was carried up stairs and Dr. Hall immediately summoned. An examination showed that the skull was badly fractured. Hughes was removed to his home, No. 206 East North street, where he now lies in a dangerous condition. Dr. Hall thinks, however, that with proper care he will recover. Montgomery left, and up to noon had not been arrested.

Common Pleas Court.

The damage suits against the P. & C. St. L. R. Co., growing out of the wreck of a wagon and killing of a team belonging to the Champion Coal and Ice Co., at Fair street crossing, a year or more ago, came up in Common Pleas court this morning, before Judge Goode and a jury. Chas. E. Darling, Esq., of Xenia, is counsel for defense. Some testimony was taken, and at eleven o'clock court adjourned until 1:30 p. m., the jury going out in a body to visit the scene of the accident, taking a street car at High street. It was snowing at the time of the smash, and the question turns on whether or not the locomotive gave the usual warning signals.

D. Nell, one of those assessed for the Mud Creek ditch, which has been up and down in official bodies for so long a time, filed petition last evening, in Common Pleas against S. Sullivan, the commissioners of Clark and Miami counties and others, asking for an injunction stopping further proceedings. A restraining order was issued until February 16, and notice is to be served on the parties to appear on that day, when the case will be heard on its merits.

George Steele was arranged and pleaded not guilty to an indictment for assault and battery. Bail was continued. His counsel gave notice of intention to file motion for continuance in the case, on ground of absence of witnesses.

Bills of exceptions was filed in the cases brought by Bateman and others at South Charleston, in which judgment for damages was rendered against the Ohio Southern Ry. Co., and the cases will be taken up to Circuit court.

Judge Goode reserved his decision in the Worthington divorce case, heard yesterday.

Chapter of Accidents.

The family of Mr. L. H. Olds no doubt realize the truth of the saying that "troubles never come singly." Early last evening Miss Olds, the daughter, made a misstep and fell in the house, fracturing one arm near the wrist and dislocating the wrist joint. Dr. Kay attended the lady.

About half-past seven o'clock this morning, while coasting at the South Factory street bridge, Harry Graham, the young stepson of M. W. Webb, the Arcade druggist, was seriously injured by being thrown from his sled against a tree. On examination by a doctor, it could not be found that any ribs were broken, but the boy is injured in the side and the concussion caused some internal disturbance in the region of the stomach; just how serious is not yet known exactly.

Mrs. Charlotte Kinney, whose injury was reported Saturday, is now doing reasonably well, and notwithstanding her advanced years, is likely to recover.

Sowing the Wind and Reaping the Whirlwind.

The "Hole in the Wall" is a notorious saloon of the lowest class on East street, so called because it is in the basement of a house, forming a sort of bank wall to the ground above. It is kept by an old man named Mike Kennedy, who has a hopeful son, Jim Kennedy, a good deal of a tough, as was to have been expected in the case of one so surrounded. Jim was drunk last night, and early in the evening raised a terrible racket in the house, threatening to kill people, it is said. A call was sent in for the patrol wagon but the young man had taken himself off before it arrived.

Early this morning he returned to the house, perfectly sober, kicked in the door and began a brutal assault upon the old man, beating him about the head and face in a frightful manner, making one side of his face almost to a jelly, nobody seeming to have courage to interfere. The wagon was called out again and responded on quick time, but after venting his malice, the young man had skipped and could not be found. It is believed he is in hiding somewhere in the neighborhood, and the police are sure to get him sooner or later. The officers say old man Kennedy is likely to carry the marks of his beating, at the hands of his own son, to the grave.

W. T. Chamberlain, of Norwich, Conn., has invented a way of carrying cartridges with compressed air in lieu of powder. The shell is pressed in a receiver and then filled with compressed air. A valve in the base of the cartridge closes when it is removed from the receiver, and the cartridge is ready for use. The shell is discharged by opening the valve, when the air forcibly drives the projectile from the barrel. The inventor claims to have obtained a range of half a mile, with a pressure of 200 pounds to the inch.

Near Gifford's Station, on the Station Island Railroad, there is a peculiar growth of woodland. The roots of the trees are all from four to six feet above the surface of the ground. The soil is very porous, and the unusual appearance of the grove is attributed to the action of water and frost.

THE LICK OBSERVATORY.

Its Site a Favored Spot—Suitable Atmospheric Conditions.

Before Mr. Lick changed his board of trustees he grew distrustful of the site which had been selected on the borders of Lake Tahoe, and chose another on what is now known as Mount Hamilton. The latter is a prominence in the Coast Range of California, forty-four hundred feet above the level of the sea, and some fourteen miles in a straight line east of San Jose.

The view from the summit is one of the most commanding in the United States. Through a ravine towards the west the spectator sees the city of San Jose, its buildings dotting with white the beautiful plain in which it is situated. The view of the Pacific Ocean beyond is cut off by a range of mountains.

Toward the north the eye takes in a vast region, covered with innumerable hills, half mountain and half field. In very clear weather the peak of Mount Shasta may be seen at a distance of more than two hundred and fifty miles. On the east, above the neighboring hills, a fine view of the outlines of the Sierra Nevada range, one hundred and thirty miles distant, may be obtained at sunrise. On the south the view is bounded by another peak about the same height as Mount Hamilton. Between the two mountains lies a ravine more than a thousand feet deep. Snow and glaciers are wanting, so that the views do not compare in magnificence with those obtained in the Alps, but the clearness of the atmosphere partly compensates for this by the extent and variety of the field which the eye takes in.

The astronomer is not concerned with the earth, but with the heavens; and an elevated station is of no use to him unless it brings some advantage in looking upward. Other circumstances come into play to such an extent that the mere gain of going above a mile of the atmosphere is comparatively slight, and, as a matter of fact, many of the finest observations have been made at sea-level. Notwithstanding the clearness of the air, doubt was thrown upon the suitability of the site for astronomical observations.

Observers had reported a current of warm air rising up the side of the mountain at night sufficiently strong to carry a sheet of tissue paper out of sight. Such a current would be fatal to astronomical observations, and it became important, before commencing the building, to have a thorough trial of the atmospheric conditions made by a competent observer.

The astronomers who were consulted in recommending S. W. Burnham, of Chicago, as the best available place in the case. This gentleman, although an amateur in the science, has gained a world-wide reputation by the discovery, with an eight-inch telescope, of a great number of double stars, which had escaped the scrutiny of the Herschels and the Struves. Long practice at Chicago in all sorts of atmospheric conditions fitted him to recognize good conditions more quickly and certainly than one who had devoted himself to more widely extended branches of the science.

In the summer of 1879 Mr. Burnham accepted a proposal to proceed to California with his telescope, and spend several weeks in surveying the heavens from the top of Mount Hamilton. The month of August found him installed in a little observatory which had been designed and erected by Captain Floyd. The results of his examination exceeded all expectations, and an astronomer has seldom had occasion to make so enthusiastic a report as that of Mr. Burnham. Not only were the atmospheric conditions of the finest kind, but night after night the astronomer enjoyed such views of the heavenly bodies as Chicago offered him only a few nights in the year. The general experience of observers is that the very finest nights for seeing are few in number; the man who can secure a dozen a year would be considered extremely fortunate. Even one of these favorable nights might not remain so for an hour. But at Mount Hamilton that steadiness of view which is so rarely to be found at less favored spots generally continued through the whole night.

When the future astronomer who shall scan the heavens from this unsurpassed spot with an unrivaled telescope will enjoy during the whole year such weather as occurs during summer and autumn can not be foretold, but even if it were not, it would be more than satisfied with the year's work which he can perform during the favorable season.

As bearing on this subject we may cite the observations and photographs of the transit of Venus taken at the Lick Observatory in 1882 by Professor F. P. Todd. These proved to be the finest photographs of the transit ever taken. The skill of the astronomer was indeed very requisite to the work; but this would have availed nothing had the condition of the atmosphere been unfavorable. Altogether, we may assume that so far as mere looking is concerned, no existing observatory is so favorably situated as that now being erected by the Lick trustees.—Simon Newcomb, in Harper's Magazine for February.

The Umbrella For Flirtation.

There is one particular in which the umbrella, as the girls have all learned, is far superior for flirtation purposes to the handkerchief, or the glove or the fan, or any other article that a lady usually carries in her hand. If she sees the dude with the man who can't see to flirt in his eye, and she happens to be with her mamma so that correct behavior cannot be the dude, who always passes, if he is skillful in the art, next to the girl and not next to the correct mamma. Then, with the umbrella as a shield, the girl casts a quick glance at the young dude, of coquetry and triumph mingled. She passes on and brings the umbrella to a plumb line and looks innocently at her correct mamma by her side and asks demurely: "What were you saying, mamma, dear?" The umbrella in the hands of such a girl is a bonanza.—San Francisco Chronicle.

Better Than a Dagger.

They sat on opposite sides of the street-car, and he settled himself back for a long stare at her. He began at the feather of her hat, and had got as far down as her throat when she could stand it no longer. She didn't ring the bell and leave the car in a huff; neither did she change her seat to avoid his impudent stare. She had already paid her fare, but she felt for her purse, took from it a silver dollar, and extending it to the fellow she sweetly asked:

"Will you please pay my fare?"

"Aw—oh—certainly—with pleasure," he replied, and he shoved the dollar to the driver.

"Change!" shouted the man. "No good—that's a counterfeit!"

The man turned red and green and blue and crushed strawberry. He inspected the dollar and saw that the driver was right. After a painful moment he slipped it into his vest pocket, fished out a dollar bill, and when the change had been given him he handed the lady 95 cents and retreated to the back platform to swear.

"I will send it to some charity," whispered the lady to her left-hand neighbor. "The object was to get rid of his impudent presence; it is an experiment that never fails."—Detroit Free Press.
